INTRODUCTION.

The Town of Dedham, at a meeting held May 12, 1851, "voted to instruct the Town's School Committee to hire a building and teacher, and establish a High School according to law."

Also, "voted that the sum of one thousand dollars be raised by tax for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a High School, to be expended by the Town School Committee."

In accordance with these votes, the Committee elected Mr. Charles J. Capen as Principal, and also hired the hall in which he had for several years taught a private school. This hall was on Church street, over the store of Mr. William Field, and was commonly known as Masonic Hall.

It was decided to admit to the school only such pupils as passed a satisfactory written examination. To show what standard of admission was set up, and what requirements the schools of the town were expected to meet, and also to preserve it as an educational curiosity, the entire list of the questions used in this examination is here given.

every one of the two hundred and four questions. The lowest one admitted had given one hundred and seventy-two correct answers, or eighty-four per cent.

The school opened Monday, Sept. 15, 1851, and occupied Masonic Hall till September, 1854, when it was removed to the Town House on Bullard street. During the summer of 1855 a High School House was erected on Highland street, and was dedicated on the tenth of December. The school remained there nearly twenty-two years. The present High School House was first occupied October 3, 1887.

It is the purpose of this catalogue, so far as it is historical, to indicate the family ties, the occupations, and the residences of all who have been members of the school. As most of the facts concerning those who are still living have been obtained directly from the persons themselves, and as those relating to the dead have generally been supplied by their nearest relatives, it is presumed that the record is accurate. In a few instances, however, no information could be obtained; but it is hoped that all persons, who have furnished material for this catalogue by filling out the circulars, will find that careful use has been made of their valuable assistance. If errors still exist in the work, it must be excused on the ground that all human performances are subject to imperfections.

As it was not convenient to make any other classification, both the teachers and the students are arranged in the catalogue according to the years when they became connected with the School. The Post Office address is printed in Italics.
